Registration of Trusts

LOCAL PROFESSIONAL TRUSTED

The law surrounding registration of trusts is changing.
Here we summarise the main changes in case they affect you...

So, what is changing?

The changes relate to the rules regarding trusts. Previously, trusts which had a liability to tax needed to be registered with HMRC. This requirement is now being extended to apply to almost all trusts, even if no tax is due.

What trusts need to be registered?

Some examples of trusts which need to be registered are:

- Trusts which have been set up in writing (express trusts)
- Funds left to children under a will and held for them until they reach a specified age
- Properties where the people registered as owners at the Land Registry differ from the people who are entitled to benefit from the property
- Properties where a co-owner has died and left another person a right to occupy the property
- Trusts set up by financial advisors (we understand that many financial advisors are not intending to register these trusts on behalf of their clients)

Please note: if you have a trust set up in your will, this does not come into effect until you die. This trust does not need to be registered in your lifetime.

Who needs to register the trust and what is the deadline?

The trustees are responsible for registering the trust which must be registered before 1st September 2022.

Do I need to appoint a solicitor to register the trust for me?

No, you do not. However, if you are unsure whether or not the trust needs to be registered or if you would like someone to register it on your behalf, we would be happy to help you.

Please contact Tracy Lungley on 01689 822554 for more information and advice.

Do I need to do anything once the trust is registered?

Once registered, you need to make sure the information held about the trust is up to date. HMRC need to be notified of any changes to the trust, such as changes to trustees and beneficiaries. They also need to be informed if the trust comes to an end.

What happens if I do not register a trust when I should have done?

HMRC propose to issue fines for non-compliance. It is not yet clear how much these fines will be or whether they will be lenient initially.

Please note: this is a general update summarising the main changes and is not a complete statement. We have also not reviewed your particular circumstances and you may or may not be affected by these changes.

If you consider these new rules might affect you and you would like assistance with registering a trust, please do contact us on 01689 822554 and ask for Tracy Lungley.
